To the Editor

Kudos to the Chef

Just a few lines to commend Chef Yochanan for the very normal recipes he offers in his column. What impresses me most is that he realizes who Hamodia Magazine's readers are: for the most part either young mothers busy with a myriad of household chores and raising children, a full time job that leaves us little spare to potchka, or older working mothers with the same time constraints. I realize from reading his recipes that he also appreciates that most of us do not have unlimited budgets to purchase little used or exotic ingredients. I guess that is why he presents nourishing dishes that can be quickly and economically prepared. Please convey to him how much I appreciate his not allowing a desire to impress us with his being a master chef, which he is, or his creativity, which he has, to take center stage when he presents his twice-monthly column.

I was especially impressed that for Yom Kippur he suggested nothing foreign or exotic but wonderful, heimish Kreplach. How refreshing!
